Subject: Microsoft SHOULD NOT be allowed to set its own monopoly-extending remedy

How is it possible that a declared monopolist is allowed to set their own remedy. Especially since this remedy is extending their monopoly and even squeezing out some main competitors for that market namely Apple. They should not be allowed to make donations of software to anyone. Firstly because it extends their monopoly and secondly because the retail value of their software is far greater than what they would actually have to dole out. Let's not let them get away with murder here.
